

SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

Sustainable development means meeting our own needs without compromising the ability of others, including future generations, to meet their needs.

The health and wellbeing of our economy, society and environment are intrinsically linked. They need to support and enhance each other - not operate in ways which harm or damage each other.

This means seeking to address existing inequalities, so that future benefits are shared equitably, and taking a long term view of the decisions we make to avoid choosing short term wins which create long term losses.

Sustainable development means a fairer, healthier, more prosperous future.

"A shared blueprint for peace and prosperity for people and the planet, now and into the future".
